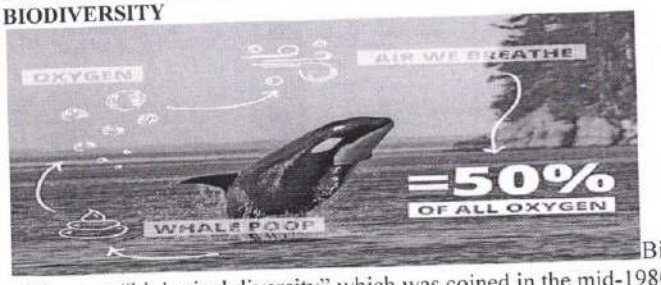
WHAT IS BIODIVERSITY?

Biodiversity is the sum of all life on earth. Every single individual life form from the smallest bacteria in the soil to the largest whale in the sea, is a component of Earth's biodiversity. But biodiversity doesn't stop at the individual. Biodiversity is also the relationships between these life forms and their habitat. That includes the relationship between plankton and whales that help produce oxygen in the atmosphere, seeds and rhinos that help plant forests, and bacteria and plants that change the chemistry of soils.

INDIVIDUAL LIFEFORMS + THE INTERACTIONS BETWEEN THOSE LIFEFORMS = BIODIVERSITY



Biodiversity is an abbreviation of the term "biological diversity" which was coined in the mid-1980s with the help of the legendary tropical biologist, Thomas Lovejoy. In the sciences, biodiversity is measured at several levels: genetic, species, communities, and ecosystems.

Humans are very much a member of the biodiversity community, and our own cultural diversity is increasingly recognized to be a product of local biodiversity. Culture is closely connected to the wild nature from which human communities emerge. The term "bio-cultural diversity" describes the relationship between human culture and the surrounding ecology.

Biodiversity tends to be far higher in the tropics than in cold, polar regions, meaning that in the tropics there are the most species, more genetic data, and more complex ecological interactions. Still, even the coldest, darkest regions, from the polar seas to the deepest caves, are rich in lifeforms. And each and every one of these lifeforms contributes something important to the chemistry of their, and our, environment.

The highest quality biodiversity is often found in two types of places: protected area wildlands and those territories stewarded by Indigenous Peoples.

BIODIVERSITY: WHY DOES IT MATTER?

Earth's biodiversity is its most valuable and most necessary resource. Biodiversity is the primary source of Earth's biosphere – the life web that produces everything humans need most: food, water, many modern medicines, and air. While other planets are likely rich in minerals of high monetary value here on Earth, no other planet that we know of have the conditions necessary for human civilization.

Earth's biodiversity is the very basis for our own survival. This is demonstrated repeatedly, across the planet, at the macro and microscopic scale. Without plants, there would be no oxygen. Without bees, many of our crops would vanish. Other benefits of biodiversity are even more fundamental. The hardwood trees in the rainforests that are our most effective above-ground carbon sinks are also the product of the relationship between seeds and the fruit-eating animals that eat them. Trees are up to 500x more likely to germinate when the seeds have first passed through the digestion system of a bat, monkey, or elephant.

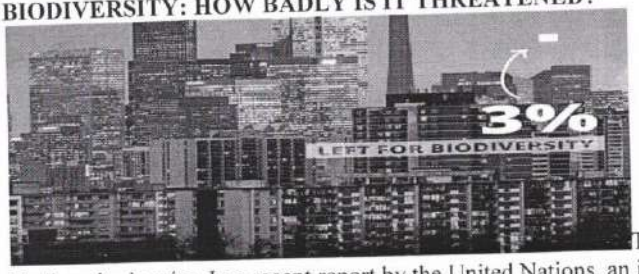
Microscopic biodiversity in our soils creates the chemical conditions necessary for healthy, abundant, and sustainable crops. Many new medicines are found in nature, including cancer fighting fungi and pain killing tree resins.

Economically, the services provided by biodiversity are estimated to be double the world's annual GDP – although this number is difficult to calculate as many of biodiversity's life-giving services cannot be replicated at scale by human technology.

BIODIVERSITY: HOW BADLY IS IT THREATENED?



The current projection for biodiversity is grim. In a recent report by the United Nations, an international coalition of scientists concluded that within the next 80 years, we are on track to lose over one million known species. That is one species in eight. In addition, the populations of individuals species have plunged. Tigers have lost 97% of their populations, migratory birds are estimated to have lost approximately 70% of their populations. In the span of only a few decades, the biomass of humans and our livestock has come to total 24x more than that of all other wild mammals!

The single biggest threat to biodiversity is habitat loss, linked to food production on land and in the sea. Biodiversity needs space to survive. Every animal needs a home. That home is wilderness. When we remove wildlands and convert them into industrial production spaces, we simultaneously subtract the landscapes needed for life production. The landscapes we depend on are for our own survival.

When we lose biodiversity, we reduce our ability to fight climate change, grow sustainable and healthy crops, have access to clean and abundant water, prevent pandemics, and plan for a future for our children and grandchildren.

Humans need biodiversity. And because the decline in biodiversity is caused by humans, biodiversity now needs us to transform our behavior.

THE MOST IMPORTANT STEP YOU CAN TAKE TO PROTECT BIODIVERSITY

Humans need wild nature in order to survive. The best solution for fighting climate change and ending the extinction crisis is to set aside enough space for nature to support healthy biodiversity. That means protecting at least half the planet's land and and seas. Scientists conclude that if we do so by 2030 we can successfully avert the worst of the climate and extinction emergencies. (In some cases, we need more than half. Fragile ecosystems, like rainforests, need up to 80% protected or stewarded by local, sustainable communities.)

Protecting the planet at that scale may seem like a huge task, but in fact, this is a historic opportunity for us to transform the way we live with nature. Because we must protect half the entire planet, that means every region, every community, every individual is on the frontlines of conservation. You are on the frontlines of conservation, and you can make a difference.

The challenge is that while we need biodiversity and biodiversity needs us, most people around the world still don't know about the critical importance of wild lands and the biodiversity they support.

REPORT OF THE JATHA PROGRAM

Place: Sindagi Town

The Department of History arranged a student's Jatha with Dr S C Kambale HOD & faculty member Dr Suma Nirni with the support of Hon. Principal and IQAC coordinator on 24th December 2021 to bring an awareness among people of Sindgi Town about "Save Historical Monuments and Antiquities".

The Jatha starting with College premises moved through the Basaveshwar circle holding Banner and Placards reached ancient Temple of Lord Sangameshwar. We observed so many statues which witness the Ruling of King Kalyani Chalukyas.

With slogans, Placards and interaction with people the Jatha successfully brought an awareness among the public to Save Historical Monuments and Antiquities.

Natural resource

Natural resources are resources that are drawn from nature and used with few modifications. This includes the sources of valued characteristics such as commercial and industrial use, aesthetic value, scientific interest, and cultural value. On Earth, it includes sunlight, atmosphere, water, land, all minerals along with all vegetation, and wildlife.[1][2][3][4]

Natural resources are part of humanity's natural heritage or protected in nature reserves. Particular areas (such as the rainforest in Fatu-Hiva) often feature biodiversity and geodiversity in their ecosystems. Natural resources may be classified in different ways. Natural resources are materials and components (something that can be used) that can be found within the environment. Every man-made product is composed of natural resources (at its fundamental level).

A natural resource may exist as a separate entity such as fresh water, air, or any living organism such as a fish, or it may be transformed by extractivist industries into an economically useful form that must be processed to obtain the resource such as metal ores, rare-earth elements, petroleum, timber and most forms of energy. Some resources are renewable, which means that they can be used at a certain rate and natural processes will restore them, whereas many extractive industries rely heavily on non-renewable resources that can only be extracted once.

Natural-resource allocations can be at the center of many economic and political confrontations both within and between countries. This is particularly true during periods of increasing scarcity and shortages (depletion and overconsumption of resources). Resource extraction is also a major source of human rights violations and environmental damage. The Sustainable Development Goals and other international development agendas frequently focus on creating more sustainable resource extraction, with some scholars and researchers focused on creating economic models, such as circular economy, that rely less on resource extraction, and more on reuse, recycling and renewable resources that can be sustainably managed.

Renewability

Renewable resources: These resources can be replenished naturally. Some of these resources, like solar energy, air, wind, water, etc. are continuously available and their quantities are not noticeably affected by human consumption. Though many renewable resources do not have such a rapid recovery rate, these resources are susceptible to depletion by over-use. Resources from a human use perspective are classified as renewable so long as the rate of replenishment/recovery exceeds that of the rate of consumption. They replenish easily compared to non-renewable resources.

The waters of the White Nile River are a key natural resource for Uganda.

Non-renewable resources: These resources are formed over a long geological time period in the environment and cannot be renewed easily. Minerals are the most common resource included in this category. From the human perspective, resources are non-renewable when their rate of consumption exceeds the rate of replenishment/recovery; a good example of this are fossil fuels, which are in this category because their rate of formation is extremely slow (potentially millions of years), meaning they are considered non-renewable. Some resources naturally deplete in amount without human interference, the most notable of these being radio-active elements such as uranium, which naturally decay into heavy metals. Of these, the metallic minerals can be re-used by recycling them,[5] but coal and petroleum cannot be recycled.[6] Once they are completely used they take millions of years to replenish. So its our prime duty to save these resources for a better future.

A special Lecture was arranged in the Department with the support of Hon. Principal, IQAC coordinator and faculty members of physics on 27th January 2021. Shri. Pradeep Katti

C. M. Managuli ScienceCollege, Sindgi, was accepted our invitation to deliver a special lecture on Semiconductors for B.Sc. Physics students. Shri Pradeep Katti delivered a very effective Lecture on Thermodynamic Potentials. All B.Sc. Students of our Department of Physics were updated their knowledge and came to know that the applications of Thermodynamic Potentials are very important in solving many thermodynamic related problems.The Special Lecture Program was over after Vote of thanks proposed by Shri Manjunath D Madagond, faculty, Dept. of Physics

REPORT OF THE JATHA

PLACE: CHATTARKI, VILLAGE.

1] Preservation of old Monuments plays an Important role in cultivating pride our Heritage and past making us unique in the World. A Heritage that speaks of our glorious past. Thus,there is no doubt that preservation, Conservation and Restoration of the heritage buildings in India is of utmost importance.

2] Promote awareness and sensitize people concerning the benefits if preserving the historical and cultural aspects of built heritage, sites and Antiquities. Public take important initiatives to preserve the Monuments and Antiquities.

As a part of above concept The Department of History arranged a field/village visit.

With the permission of IQAC and Principal of our college, the students of our Dept. along with Dr S C Kambale HoD and faculty member Dr. Suma Nirni visited the village Chattaraki in the Sindgi Taluka on January 2020. With the cooperation of Gram Panchayat President we all visited the good old Temple of Lord Shiva where we observed many monuments and antiquities. Our students took a Jatha in the village streets and created the awareness among the women and men about the the importance the preservation of monuments and antiquities in the Temples. The people of village shown very good response towards our Jatha. Thus the Jatha (Awareness Rally) was a grand successful event in our Dept. of History outreach programs/ activities

Report on Guest Lecture by Prof. A. L. Burali

Report on Guest Lecture: "Problems faced by women entrepreneurs"

Date : 08-08-2019

Venue: Room no.F5

Time: 12:00 noon to 1.30 pm

Topic: "Problems faced by women entrepreneurs"

The department of commerce has organised a guest lecture on "Problems faced by women entrepreneurs" for B.Com second year. He gave us an insight into the problems faced by women entrepreneurs in both rural and urban areas, till date. He emphasized on the importance of implementing sincere efforts towards our aims and work towards the accomplishment of them. Women in general tend to lose themselves while trying hard to keep up to the expectations of family and society. The session was interactive and students participated in the discussions raised by the guest speaker. The session was very interactive, informative in nature and students were highly motivated.

Plant Stress Physiology

- Introduction:Now-a-days, stress, depression and anxiety are the few common words that are related to almost every human being. In fact, the human body is designed to experience stress and react to it. When we experience changes or challenges (stressors), our body produces physical and mental responses. Like humans, the plants also undergo stress and react to it. For example, if a normal plant growing under favourable light conditions is subjected to low light intensity, its photosynthetic mechanism is depleted. Simply, this low light intensity can be referred as a stress factor to the aforesaid plant.

What is 'Plant stress Physiology'?The ideal growth conditions for a given plant can be defined as the condition that allows the plant to achieve its maximum growth and reproductive potential as measured by plant weight, height, and seed number, which together comprise the total biomass of the plant. Plants are subjected to various environmental stresses, such as water deficit, drought, cold, heat, salinity and air pollution. The study of functioning of plants under adverse environmental conditions is simply called 'Plant stress physiology'. Prof. Jacob Levitt in 1972 first used the term biological stress in relation to plants and according to him, stress is simply any change in environmental condition that might adversely change the growth and development of a plant, and also prevents the plant from achieving its full genetic potential.

Types of plant stress: Plant stress can be broadly classified into two main groups, viz., 'Biotic stress' and 'Abiotic stress'. The stress factors which occur by the communication among the plant and any living organisms, i.e., viruses, bacteria, fungi, parasites, insects, weeds etc. that results in either minor injury that the plant can overcome or major injury that the plant can demise is referred as biotic stress. The biotic stresses caused by bacteria, fungi and nematodes that are ever present in the environment are called potential biotic stresses. These are subdivided into two types, viz. Allelopathy and Pathogenicity. Allelopathy refers to the biochemical inhibition of one species by another. The inhibitory chemical is released into the environment where it affects the development and growth of the neighbouring plants. These biochemicals are known as allelochemicals. For example, Juglans nigrum releases an allelochemical 'Juglone' which is a respiratory inhibitor. Plants (mainly Solanaceae family), when exposed to these allelochemicals, exhibit symptoms such as wilting, chlorosis and death.Pathogenicity refers to the potential disease-causing capacity of the pathogens. For example, the bacterium Xanthomonas citri causes citrus canker disease in the citrus plant.

Abiotic stress such as drought, excessive soil salinity, excessive watering, extreme temperatures (cold, frost and heat), salinity and mineral toxicity, too much or too little light and nutrient deficiency in the soil negatively impact growth and development of plants. These are external stress factors that can affect the plant growth for a longer duration.

Major Types of Abiotic Stress factors:

- Water deficit: Water deficit is a common stress condition arising from inadequate supply of water. The affluence of water leads to a stress called flood stress and scarcity of water leads to a stress called drought stress. The temporary inundation of plants and its parts by flooding causes oxygen deficiency to the roots and soil borne microorganisms. Effects of flooding are – nitrogen turnover in the soil is reduced; abscisic acid, ethylene and ethylene precursors are formed in larger amount; stimulation of partial stomatal closure, epinasty and abscission in leaves; cellular membrane systems break down, mitochondria and microbodies disintegrate and enzymes are partially inhibited. Water deficit is a paramount abiotic stress factor that affects the plant and its development with numerous reasons, such as excessive salinity, flooding, insufficient rainfall, etc. A plant suffers from water deficit condition either when the uptake of water through roots becomes hindered or when the rate of the so-called evil phenomena transpiration occurs relatively at a high frequency. Effects of drought are – decrease in cellular growth and synthesis of cell wall components that cause the cells to become smaller in size; increase in abscisic acid level that ultimately closes down the stomatal apparatus to the minimum; protochlorophyll formation is inhibited and photosynthetic process declines; levels of proline increases; respiration and translocation of assimilates decreases; loss of water leads to increase in the activity of hydrolytic enzymes, etc.

- Salt Stress: The assemblage of increased amount of salt in the soil than required causes inhibition of plant growth and sometime also leads to plant death; it is simply can be referred as salt stress. The plants which are present near the coastline area are subjected to salt stress. Na^{+}, Cl^{-}, K^{+}, Ca^{++} and Mg^{++} ions usually contribute to the soil salinity. Plants growing in coastline or estuaries area mainly face a number of adversities, of which absorption of water from the soil with negative water potential and interaction with high concentration of toxic sodium carbonate and chloride ions are the major problems. Based on salt tolerance, plants can be categorized into two main classes – Halophytes and Non-halophytes or glycophytes Salt stress on account of deficiency of minerals, such as K, P, S, Fe, Mo, Zn, Mg and Mn causes physiological disorders which lead to reduced growth and yields. Effects of salt salinity are – photosynthetic inhibition, water potential (Y) reduction, cell dehydration, ion cytotoxicity, leaf abscission, altered carbon partitioning, cytorrhysis cavitation, membrane and protein destabilization, ROS production, ion cytotoxicity and cell death, etc.

- Light Stress: In a condition of low light intensity below the compensation point, the shade loving plants, i.e., 'Sciophytes' evolve, while in high light intensity, 'Heliophytes' used to get evolved. In low light intensity, stomata do not open fully; hence, there is a comparatively less diffusion of gases. As a result, the rate of photosynthesis and the chlorophyll synthesis is also depleted. High light intensity also inhibits photosynthesis. Photoperiodic changes inhibit flowering.

Sub: Invitation to deliver a special lecture in Physics …

Respected sir,

We are delighted by having an opportunity to invite you as a speaker for a special lecture in physics to enlighten our students regarding Thermal Power on 11/02/2019. Our students will be honored to have been able to share your knowledge.

Hope that you will accept our invitation and help our students to enrich their knowledge.

Thanking you

Yours Sincerely,

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL LECTURE PROGRAM 2018-19

A special Lecture was arranged in the Department with the support of Hon. Principal, IQAC coordinator and faculty members of physics on 11th February 2019 Shri. Diwakar B Math BLDEA's K C P Science College, Vijayapur was accepted our invitation to deliver a special lecture on Thermal Power for B.Sc. Physics students. Shri. Diwakar B Math delivered a very effective Lecture on Thermal Power. All B.Sc. Students of our Department of Physics were updated their knowledge and came to know that the Thermal Power plant requires small land area that works on Coal fuel, Cost of establishment also less, Power production efficiency is high enough.

Lastly the Special Lecture Program was ended with Vote of thanks proposed by Miss, Jyoti Handral, faculty, Dept. of Physics.
